

Parents – questions for you to ask:

- How can I help my student transition to college?
- What safety and security systems are in place?
- Who do I contact if I have concerns about how my student is doing in college?
- Will I have access to my student's grades and other college records?
- What kind of support services are available for my student (tutors, writing lab, career counseling, etc.)?

Making the most of your campus visit

Why should I go on a campus visit?

It's kind of like buying a new pair of shoes – you have to try them on first. Through a campus visit, you can get a feel for the college and determine if it's the right fit for you.

When should I visit?

Visit during your junior year and in the fall of your senior year. Try to schedule your visits while college is in session to fully experience the school's environment.

How do I set up a campus visit?

Start by reviewing campus visit information on the college website, and then contact the admissions office to set up your visit. Ask to meet with someone in admissions, financial aid, and possibly with a faculty member in your anticipated area of study.

What questions should I ask?

Here are some basic questions:

Ask an admissions representative...

- What is the deadline to apply for admission?
- What housing options are available?
- What general education classes are required?
- Are there study-abroad opportunities?

Ask a financial aid counselor...

- What is the cost of tuition, fees, room & board, and books?
- How do I apply for scholarships and financial aid, and what are the deadlines?
- Are academic and departmental scholarships available?
- What are some suggestions for financing college?

Ask a faculty member...

- How can I determine if this area of study is right for me?
- What can I expect for coursework and workload while I'm in college?
- What are the biggest challenges faced by students in this major?
- Are classes taught by professors or graduate assistants?
- How do I learn about internships?

Take LOTS of notes and photos during your tour. You'll be glad you did when it's time to compare colleges and narrow your choices.
